Westminster Abbey Returns to Normal

Reopened to the public recently, for the first time since the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, Westminster abbey showed the results of some renovating and restoration work. For the first time in centuries, parts of the abbey were cleaned and portions of it restored. View shows the choir and the crossing. Many of the stained glass windows have been freed of the heavy coating of dust which had obscured them for generations.

The True Values of Love

IN SPITE of the frequency with which we have had it dinned in our ears in the last decade or so, most of us have not yet fully realized the dual nature of love: that on the one side it is a homely affair springing from the biologic need and from our need of companionship and loyalty, while on the other it is romance, glamour, star-dust. Everyone knows which aspect of love claims more attention. Ask a hundred people under 35 what love means, and not more than five of them will first mention companionship or loyalty.

This intense concentration upon the romantic aspect of love has had two effects, neither of them particularly good. In the first place it has tended to make love seem the only source of romance, instead of being only one of the ways to romance. Other roads not so highly advertised and plainly marked exist and ought to be used. For love's own dear sake, if for no other reason, they should not be neglected.

What Dewey calls "creative thinking" is one of these roads. To chart a new trail through a strip of intellectual wilderness, to clear up old tangles and confusions, surely that is adventure in every sense of the word. Pasteur in his laboratory must have had all the sense of living meaningfully and swiftly that romantic love can give. Edna St. Vincent at her desk and Eva Lae Gallien working up a new interpretation of an old love have it. Anyone who thinks creatively has it.

Religion is another source of romance. Real religion, I mean, not the perfunctory, outward-seeming thing most of us have. If religion means anything, it is an adventure in friendship with the universe. But the universe is apparently a bristly, stern old sphinx who must be wooed patiently and approached understandingly. So long as it holds death and pain and disillusionment, there will be adventure of the most stirring sort in the attempt to be friends with it. Real religion involves as vigorous, heroic effort as we moderns are ever called upon to put forth. Travel is another way to romance. Whether we take it knapsack and camera in hand or sitting at our firesides as most of us have to, romance is to be had from it. Far countries and far-away, mysterious peoples pique the imagination.

Enthusiasm for a hobby is another road. Doctors tell us that half the physical breakdowns which come to Americans at middle age could be avoided if we would make our hobbies real enthusiasms. A well-loved hobby will go far toward giving permanent zest and meaning to existence—which is the essential function of romance.

Another way of making time march blithely instead of dragging uneventfully is through the cultivation of intellectual interests. Learning how the machinery of life runs is an absolutely thrilling undertaking (I mean that literally), open to anyone who can read intelligently. The pity is that so few ever discover it.

When one considers that list of "roads to romance" it seems unfortunate that they should have had so little emphasis in comparison with love. When we hear day in and day out, especially if we wear skirts and are brought up on a type of fiction supposed to be good for the wearers of skirts, is that love is the most glorious experience we shall ever have, and that without it we shall never grow into the interesting and interested creatures we were meant to be.

The second unfortunate result of concentrating on romantic love and neglecting the other roads to romance is to multiply our difficulties in dealing with love itself.

At this day and age, after all that has been said on the subject, even the stupidest of us should have understood that romantic love is most evanescent. It comes and presently it has gone. Out of it another relationship which is durable and on the whole more satisfactory may be made of sufficient effort and wisdom are forthcoming from the two parties involved—but it is not romantic love, not star-dust, not anything to set the pulses bounding and the eyes glowing. Like most surprisingly lovely things, rosebuds and days and babies, for instance, romantic love inevitably becomes something else, something perhaps more to be prized, yet something else.

The results of the failure to understand this simple truth are evident in many unhappy lives. In the first place the lot of the unloved is

300 Teachers to Convene Here

Over three hundred teachers from all parts of the Fraser Valley will gather in Abbotsford on November 12, for their annual convention, and arrangements for the day are almost complete.

The convention this year is under the auspices of the Fraser Valley District Council, affiliated with the British Columbia Federation of Teachers.

Delegates will be received and registered at 9.00 a.m. and a general business session held in the Abbotsford Theatre until 12.45 noon.

The luncheon and banquet, which are being provided by the ladies of the M.S.A. Auxiliary, will be held in the auditorium of the Philip Sheffield Memorial high school.

General business sessions will be held in both the Abbotsford elementary and Philip Sheffield high schools, and addressed by outstanding educationalists from Vancouver, New Westminster and Victoria.

In view of the widespread interest in educational matters generally and especially in the Matsqui-Sumas-Abbotsford demonstration area, a record attendance is expected at the convention.

Any enquiries, particularly from outside sources, should be addressed to W. S. McRae, secretary, Bradner, or H. A. McDonald, president, Abbotsford.

made harder than it need be. Freud may be partly responsible for the general impression that no sort of happiness is possible without a well-adjusted love life. But back of him are the long years of popular confusion of love with romance, a confusion which has made many a spinster wear herself emotionally thin with self-abasement and self-pity instead of setting sensibly to work at filling her life with other sorts of adventure.

Another result of limiting romance to love is to make marriage about three times as difficult as it ought to be. Half the disappointment with marriage could be saved if somehow people could be freed from the notion that love and love alone is to provide a life-time of romantic adventure.

It has become a truism to call the forties "the dangerous age". Feeling the futility of the days when romantic love is going to be possible, the individual with graying hair and rounding paunch makes a last snatch at it. What drives him is not so much desire to taste once more the sweetness and pain of youthful love as the desperate fear that all romance is fading forever. Because the only romance he knows about is sex, his aberration is in that direction.

But it need not be. In Gauguin it became an irrepressible longing to work with line and color. In Canrad it was an urge to learn the use of words masterfully. In others, who are not geniuses, it has been an uncontrollable desire to escape the routine of work which has come to seem dull or futile into a new occupation which promises to call out their unused powers.

If the late fling at romance outside marriage is pathetic, so is the adolescent snatch at it through marriage. Every year thousands of 15- and 16- and 17-year-old youngsters marry, simply because they are in a mood for romance and suppose it can only be obtained through sex. A year or two later (that being

Former Peardonville Live Y Leader Weds on Van. Island

The marriage took place in St. George's United Church, Courtenay, V.I., on October 20, of Miss Marjorie Elsie Green, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Green, of Poplar, to Mr. Harold Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Martin, Fleet, Hampshire, Eng., and nephew of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Barker, Kilgord. Rev. R. Moses of Powell River officiated. Mrs. Walter Scott and Mr. Robt. Olwant attended the bride and groom.

After the ceremony a dinner party was given at Riverside Hotel, Courtenay. Following the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Martin take up residence at Qualicum Bay, where Mr. Martin is in business.

For several years Mr. Martin was leader of Peardonville young peoples group, and in various capacities gave his useful services to community movements in Abbotsford district. Following an injury which incapacitated him for several months, he secured employment as the caretaker of an estate at Parksville, and a year ago purchased sea-front property which he is improving as a resort. His wife was also member of Poplar young people's group and taught school in this district.

Friends Honor Mrs. Flodin

On the occasion of her 60th birthday last Friday, Mrs. Emil Flodin of Matsqui was surprised by a large number of friends who came to extend their best wishes. A most enjoyable afternoon was spent in her home and lovely garden. Several telegrams from relatives in Sweden were received and read with interest.

Those present were Mr. Svenson of Lynden, Wash., Mr. and Mrs. A. Sandberg, Abbotsford; Miss Hilda Lundstrom, Mr. and Mrs. A. Whitson, Mrs. Moe, Mrs. Gust Farman, Miss Lillian Farman, Mrs. A. Gustafson, Mrs. E. Carlson, Mrs. H. Eklund, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Flodin, Mrs. P. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Carlson, Mr. J. W. Carlson, Mrs. P. Paulgaard, Mrs. A. Poignant, Mrs. C. Brundin, New Westminster, and Mr. John Jacobson, a brother-in-law of the Flodins, who celebrated his 72nd birthday on the same day.

SUMAS DISTRICT

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pocock of Unity, Sask. visited Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lee, Sumas Prairie, last week.

The Sumas municipal grader went to work on McKenzie road and the public works department grader did an equally good job with chuck holes on Riverside road between Abbotsford and Clayburn last week. But some of the Abbotsford village streets are again badly in need of a day's work.

Mr. Walter Lane is enlarging his barn. His farm is on a south slope of Sumas mountain above the former Fooks property.

Dr. Saunders, who owns the former M. Murphy farm "Killarney" came out on Saturday and placarded his farm for protection of his dairy stock against hunters.

Mr. and Mrs. Elias have re-opened the store and gas station opposite the municipal hall. They are from Atcheltiz.

Work is rapidly progressing on the Vedder River Logging company's track to their new timber site on Vedder mountain, and about five miles of track have been laid. Fallers are at work and one donkey engine was moved to the new site this week, and another is expected in a few days. The remainder of the track is to be moved down in a few days.

Mel Fadden and Edgar Boley left last week for Loon Lake, Cariboo, on a hunting trip.

Sewage Fault At Huntingdon Now Corrected W. I. Told

An interesting paper, "Conditions in Saskatchewan" was read by Mrs. G. Sparrow at the meeting of Huntingdon W. I. last week at the home of Mrs. R. D. Carmichael. Also the delegates to the institute convention at Fort Langley, Mrs. Beestlstone and Mrs. Yarwood, gave reports.

A letter from the health inspector in reply to the institute's complaint against drainage conditions in the townsite, stated that sewage faults had been remedied. The ladies, however, still maintain that the ditches are yet clogged, and intend to press for further action.

The institute will give a tea early in November, and will also give assistance to the M.S.A. Hospital Auxiliary in catering to the teachers' convention to be held in Abbotsford on November 12.

Sumas Agricultural Hall Has All Modern Appointments

In formally opening Sumas Agricultural Hall last Friday evening Mr. Hall, official trustee of the M.S.A. Education Area, mentioned the efforts of his predecessors to improve the facilities of this district, and thanked those present for their co-operation in the carrying-on of the experiment. Reeve Hougren introduced Mr. Hall.

Sumas undoubtedly has now a very well-appointed public hall, with modern plumbing, cloak rooms, furnace heat, orchestral platform and good dance floor. No mortgages were incurred in making the improvements, and in this respect Sumas has much to its credit. Friday's dance attracted a large crowd, mostly young folks, but the oldsters are now getting "through" with the heavy labor of autumn, and will be able to make time for the occasional get-togethers and "hops" of the winter season.

School Bus Routes Being Extended

The News is informed by Mr. Hall that school bus routes in the M.S.A. area are being extended to the furthest possible points that conditions will permit, and that these extensions are being put into effect immediately.

Centre-marking for the yellow paint strip along Interprovincial highway west of Abbotsford was again done last week.

Men's Club Give Old-fashioned Party

Musical chairs, apple games and other old-fashioned contests gave a real old-time spirit of fun at the Hallowe'en party held by the Men's Club on Tuesday evening. Over 60 persons were present, entering into the party spirit and spent a most enjoyable evening. Winners at cards were Mrs. Swalle and Mr. H. S. Andrews, firsts; consolation prizes a marrow and a pumpkin were won by Mrs. Stady and Mr. Newcombe. Songs were given by Merica Trussell and Effie Roberts, and Mr. Thompson gave several pianoforte numbers.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

Lord Tweedsmuir's new book, "Augustus," was included in the list of books scheduled for fall publication.

The Soviet purge resulted in the execution of 183 persons during August, a press recapitulation revealed. Ninety-three were in Asiatic Russia and 51 in the Leningrad region.

Vancouver's request for a direct air mail connection with the Yukon and Alaska will be taken under consideration at Ottawa, the city council was informed.

Two members of the British-Canadian Arctic expedition headed by the British geologist, Thomas H. Manning, are returning to England after a year in the northern hinterland.

Moses Cochrane, believed to be the oldest man in Toronto, died in hospital recently from what attendants believed to be influenza. Cochrane was 105.

Population of Montreal increased by 12,000 to 875,000 in 1936, according to the annual report of the Department of Health. Births and deaths decreased and marriages increased.

Dr. R. E. Jenkins, Edmonton medical health officer for the past eight years, has been appointed chief of the division of epidemiology for Canada with duties to commence in Ottawa this month.

Improved crop and feeding conditions in Manitoba resulted in the cattle population of the province reaching an all-time record high mark this summer, Hon. D. Campbell, minister of agriculture, announced.

The International Harvester Company announced that its 65,000 employees in the United States and Canada would receive $4,400,000 extra compensation at the end of the fiscal year ending Oct. 31.

Farmers in Argentina have planted 17,586,000 acres of wheat. Approximately the same as last year and about two per cent. below the average for the last five years, the Argentine bureau of rural statistics reported.

Flowers And Gardens

British Public Spends Huge Amount On Cut Flowers Each Year

One hundred tons, representing 6,000,000 blooms, would arrive at Paddington Station in a single evening. Such was the Great Western Railway's forecast early last February of the "peak" traffic in cut flowers from the Shilly Isles, Cornwall, and Guernsey.

Six months pass, and we read that 250,000 home-grown roses are sold at Covent Garden in a day; that more than 2,000,000 dozen of home-grown carnations pass through Covent Garden in a year, and that every year the public spends on cut flowers some $15,000,000. The appropriate comment seems to be "You don't say!" And, indeed, there is one thing which these impressive figures do not say for certain—that they prove a genuine love of flowers any more than an imposing "gentleman's library" proves a genuine love of books.

Evidence of a genuine love of flowers must be sought elsewhere, and the search need not take long. The annual havoc wrought on primrose patches and bluebell fields is evidence of an ignorant and selfish, but genuine love of flowers. It is a national characteristic. Foreigners, and natives returning home from abroad, observe in every cottage garden the Englishman's queer love of vegetable growths that he cannot eat nor sell. Flower shows all over the country speak to the same effect. —London Times.

Driverless Trains

Special Apparatus Used To Move Freight Cars In Germany

Freight trains will be moved from place to place without a driver as the result of a special apparatus which has been installed in the main freight station at Stuttgart, Germany. The apparatus enables freight cars to be assembled, their speed electrically controlled, and the train brought to a standstill by means of an automatic brake. The brakeman directs all these movements from his cabin, watching the progress of the train on an automatic chart.

Health LEAGUE of CANADA presents TOPICS of VITAL INTEREST

ARTICLE No. 12 Prevention Of Cancer No. 4

Education of the Public in Cancer While education of doctors in Cancer is a matter largely for the colleges and medical societies, lay education is singularly the task of the voluntary society. England has its British Empire Cancer Campaign, a medical and lay body devoted to the stimulation of research in cancer, and the People's League of Health, whose energies are directed to the education of the public in respect to disease of all kinds. France and Belgium have Le Socieete contre le Cancer, for public instruction in malignant disease, while the United States has the American Society for the Control of Cancer, as well as the flourishing Women's Field Army against Cancer. The American Society named is so impressed with the value of public education in the cancer field that for the last two years the entire resources of the Society have been directed to cancer education.

The silence of internal cancer, the absence of pain in the early stages, the insidious character of the malady, blind the man or woman to impending danger. Education in regard to internal cancer can do little other than to induce the adult, the person above 35, to have a regular medical examination at least once a year. In cancers of the skin, lips, mouth, breast and uterus, the early signs of cancer may be recognized by almost every person of intelligence. Recognition of the early signs of cancer which may be learned by anyone, would save many precious lives.

Prevention can do a very great deal in cancer control. Prevention of cancer depends, let us repeat, upon the avoidance of irritants, upon periodic health examination and education of doctors and the public about malignant disease.

Proving A White Elephant

Report States Mussolini Is Having Trouble In Abyssinia

A London letter in the Ottawa Journal says while others were urging uselessly provocative action by Great Britain, and endangering international relations, there were cooler heads who contended that, left severely alone, Mussolini would find his Moscow in Abyssinia.

That view seems to have been the shrewd one. Italy's new province is proving already a costly and embarrassing white elephant. Pacification of the native tribes, who are developing great enterprise in guerilla fighting, looks as far off as ever. It is taking half-a-million Italian settlers—behind barbed wire at that—to garrison the country. Rationing there is no easy or inexpensive problem. Worse still, they are beginning to murmur against their destiny. Abyssinia is not popular in Italy.

Incredible though it sounds, it is reported that Mussolini has made overtures to get Haile Selassie to return to Addis Ababa as titular ruler under the aegis of Imperial Rome's suzerainty. The ex-Emperor refuses to negotiate except through Geneva, and, to avoid importunity by Italian agents, has removed his son, the Crown Prince, from Jerusalem. Failing Haile Selassie, Mussolini thinks the Crown Prince might serve.

Merely Doing Their Job

Toronto Man Does Not Consider Reporters A Pest

Hon. R. C. Matthews of Toronto, minister of national revenue in Premier Bennett's cabinet from 1933 to 1935, said in an interview at Edmonton he did not "like the attitude of some business men and public leaders that reporters are pests."

"I always feel they are merely doing their job in the way they are expected to perform it, and I have found Canadian newsmen on the whole a gentlemanly and well-informed lot."

Floating Messages

Long Ocean Voyages Are Taken By Bottles Thrown Into The Sea

On July 26 of last year a hundred corked bottles were thrown into the ocean off Newfoundland by an ornithological expedition of the American Museum of Natural History. The object was to discover facts about ocean currents of the Newfoundland region.

Each bottle contained a card to be mailed to the museum with the date and place where the bottle was found. In less than a year thirteen of the cards were returned. Most of the replies were from Ireland, indicating that the bottles drifted south in the Labrador current and thence into the northeast drift current. The airline distance from Newfoundland is about 1,800 miles; it is probable that the bottles drifted much farther.

One of the most recent replies came from Felix Bartaneda, commander of a detachment of marines with the Spanish insurgents. He mailed a card from a bottle picked up near Bilbao, with the slogan "Viva Espana" written across it. Another bottle was found in Spanish waters by Frank Lowell, chief petty officer of a British warship on patrol duty in the Bay of Biscay.

Last Autumn Raymond Scheib, a senior at the University of Pittsburgh, accompanied by two friends from the Middle West, returned from a summer course at Munich University aboard the steamship New York. On October 3, four days out of Liverpool, the young men wrote a message on a page from their travel log, put it in a bottle and threw it overboard.

On April 19 Miss Peggy Murphy, of Reenraugh, Waterville, County Kerry, found the bottle in Ballinskelligs Bay, Ireland. As Scheib's name and address were the only decipherable ones on the note, Miss Murphy wrote to him and inclosed the faded paper from the bottle.

Such floating messages not only help to determine scientific facts but bring a touch of romance and color into many lives.—New York Sun.

The Only Safe Way

Stop At Railway Crossing If Train Can Be Seen

A newspaper reporter interested in getting an engineer's eye-view of grade crossing accidents recently took a ride in the cab of a fast streamlined train—and came back with an excellent tip for all motorists. A train's speed, he reports, is extremely deceptive. A fast passenger train may travel a thousand feet in a little better than eight seconds. The train may seem to be a safe distance away as you approach the crossing, when, as a matter of fact, it is perilously close. So the reporter boiled his new knowledge down to one extremely sensible bit of advice. If, when you approach a grade crossing, you can see a train approaching, you simply have not time to cross safely ahead of it. If you can see the train, wait for it.—Vancouver Sun.

More Strauss Operas

At Age Of 73 German Composer Has Two Operas In Preparation

At 73 years, Richard Strauss is able to stir two operas on the fire at the same time.

He just has removed one from the fire, to be exact. This he calls "Friedenstag," which means "Day of Peace," and may be taken to celebrate Strauss' reinstatement by Nazi cultural circles.

This work is to be given first next summer, at the Munich Staatsoper.

A second work, called "Daphne," is not yet finished. It will be heard first at Dresden, it is said. The libretto for each is the product of Joseph Gregor.

Siam Remains Neutral

Reports Of Japanese Influence Said To Be Without Foundation

Siam, during the present Far-Eastern crisis is likely to pursue a policy of strict neutrality. Reports of increasing Japanese influence, economic and political, in that country are without foundation, Reuters News Agency learned.

While previously Siam bought considerable quantities of Japanese goods, now she is tending more and more to purchase from Europe and North America. European prices, except for piece goods, compare favorably with Japanese, the former goods being of better quality and the latter only five to 10 per cent. cheaper.

Rumors the Japanese planned to land troops in Siam and advance southwards against Singapore by land and sea have never been seriously entertained in responsible quarters.

What Siamese-Japanese friendship there has been was born of economic necessity and, with European and American markets in close competition, is now on the wane.

Plane For Royal Family

Description Given Of Plane Used By His Majesty

Detailed description of the plane used by the king and members of the royal family have been released. It is a twin-engined airspeed envoy and thus far has been used only once by His Majesty—when he flew from Windsor great park to Martlesham Heath to spend a day at Southwold boys' camp.

The plane, officially attached by the air council to the king's flight at Hendon, is modified slightly as to cabin arrangements. The pilot's place is in the nose, with a place for the wireless operator immediately behind him. This control room is separated from the cabin by a leather partition with a "zip" fastener.

The cabin has four separate chairs with a central gangway between each pair, folder tables are attached to the walls before each chair, bearing ash trays and tumbler holders, (in this type of plane gas could not leak into the cabin so smoking is permitted.)

At the rear of the cabin the steward and his refreshment locker are placed. A fifth seat could be fitted if desired and there is the normal toilet compartment in the rear. The whole is designed in a general scheme of sound-proofing to exclude engine noise from the cabin.

It is a low-wing monoplane with separate undercarriage legs which may be retracted by folding backwards. Top speed is 210 miles an hour and cruising speed about 190. Range is about 650 miles.

Unknown Type Of Lizard

Found In Wyoming And Said To Be 55,000,000 Years Old

Discovery of the fossilized remains of a heretofore unknown type of lizard, believed to be 55,000,000 years old, was announced by Dr. G. L. Jenson of Princeton University, Wyoming.

Dr. Jenson, who has conducted field explorations in the fossil beds northwest of Powell for eleven years, said the well-preserved skeleton, about six inches long, was the first of its kind uncovered by scientists.

It lived a few centuries after the giant dinosaurs, whose bones have been found in the same beds at a deeper level, passed out of existence, and represents another link in the study of reptiles," Dr. Jenson said. "The lizard apparently thrived during the paleocene epoch some 55,000,000 years ago, according to geological time."

Will Be Modernized

Balmoral Castle Has Always Been Uncomfortable Place

The King and Queen propose to modernize Balmoral to a considerable extent, as they intend to spend some two autumn months there each year. The work will be put in hand when they leave Deeside in early October. Queen Victoria's ideas on the subject of comfort for herself and others were rudimentary. Ministers in attendance had to write in the bedrooms, lords and ladies in waiting were often blue with cold, there was a scarcity of bathrooms, and the furniture was upholstered in fearsome tartan.

THE CANADIAN ADVENTURE TRIP OF BOB SIM, AN ONTARIO FARM BOY

No. 15 of a Series of 16 Letters

Travelling Eastward Now—Sees Old Faithful in Yellowstone Park—Through Rainstorms in the Dust Bowl. Bob Gets Stalled on the World's Busiest Thoroughfare.

Chicago, Ill., U.S.A. (Special Despatch by Bob Sim).—Last week you remember I was writing on a boat half in and half out of Canada. We have driven almost without interruption ever since. Once or twice we stopped to sight-see. Or to snatch a wink of sleep. We arrived in the Windy City last night; what did we do? Did we go to a show or a night club? We went to bed and got ten hours' sleep.

Eastward Hoing

After eight or nine weeks westward travelling, after turning the watch ahead five times, it seemed strange to be going the other way; and rather nice, for it's homeward ho! as well as eastward ho, that we shout as we drive.

The trip took us from Vancouver Island to Seattle, Spokane, and Yellowstone Park. The American mountains that we saw are not as grand and massive as ours in Canada; but the roads are better. As a result few Canadian motorists see their own mountains. We have the materials and machinery, and the idle men, why don't we build roads to meet the demand of the tourists to see Canada. Tourist trade is one of our greatest industries, but they must have roads.

At Yellowstone we saw the geysers, the hot mud, the Grand Canyon; most interesting of all was Old Faithful, the geyser that erupts every sixty-three minutes, throwing hundreds of gallons of steam and water into a beautiful plumed column one hundred and fifty feet high. Every hour hundreds of people gather to see Old Faithful perform. They come from all over the world; and it's worth it.

If there was only one place in the world where we could see the sun set, or a rainbow, what an attraction it would be! Yet these are to be seen in our own backyard. There is no charge; why miss it, brother?

Yellowstone is one of the many National Parks in Canada and United States that are reserved by the government for the enjoyment of the people. The poorest man can ride the rails to see Banff or Cape Breton or Yellowstone; it is his park; no one can put up a fence and charge him a dollar to enjoy the beauty of the place. This policy of setting up national parks is one of the finest features of the continent. We have too few of them, as you know if you have tried to see some waterfall or valley with a barbed wire fence around it, or a sign at the gate, "Admission 50 cents." There were so many bears in Yellowstone around our tent that I slept on top of the car. Perhaps the risk of falling off was greater than the bears.

Conservation Says a Nation

When mother says leave that piece of pie for supper, or when dad says we will summerfallow the back fifty, they are saying "Conserve—Conserve."

We have spent the natural resources of this continent with wilful prodigality. Timber, minerals, oil; all have been exploited, usually for private profit, without thought of replenishing the supply, or of generations to come. Part of the Roosevelt New Deal was to initiate a nation-wide program of conservation. Part of the wastage in the last decade has been in manhood. Men thrown out of work with nothing to do; losing self respect, the desire or ability to work.

The C.C.C. program was initiated, to put unemployed to work; teach young men trades, find them jobs; and to put them to the task of conserving the resources of the nation. We saw these lads, mostly from the city, bronzed and muscled, working on C.C.C. projects. C.C.C., by the way, means Civilian Conservation Corps. Planting trees, building dams, repairing roads, are among the numberless useful tasks that are undertaken. Said one observer: "They are a lazy bunch of scamps." Remark another: "It's the best thing Roosevelt did."

Rain In The Dust Bowl

"We have frogs here seven years old that can't swim, and when this rain hit us, they had to wear life belts", a man on the street told us. "And back from here a few miles I found a man in mud up to his chin. I threw him a rope, and he said, 'Pull, hard brother, for there's a mule under me.'"

Floradora got in the mud that the natives call gumbo. Needless to say we camped right there. Next day the sun shone, and the mud was gone.

The first rain we got going west was in Saskatchewan, then went east our first was in the dust bowl of South Dakota.

In Chicago we stalled Flora on the loop, the world's busiest thoroughfare. Was our face red? More of Chicago next week—and Ontario!

Small Amount For Food

Eighty-Eight Cents Monthly Feeds One Person In India

Eighty-eight cents a month a person is all millions of persons in India spend on food, according to a report issued by the Government of India. This buys, each day, one pound of rice, ounce of milk, ounce of dried and two ounces of green vegetables and half an ounce of oils and fats. Pointing out that this diet is not only ill-balanced, but insufficient, the report indicates that a well-balanced diet on the same scale could be bought for $1.80 a month.

Plowing Match Entries Cut Down By Heavy Downpour

The steady downpour of rain last Wednesday kept away entrants and spectators, made of the field a soggy quagmire, but it did not dampen the enjoyment of those participating in the annual M.-S.A. plowing match held on the Ken. Gillies field near Clayburn.

Eleven teams and plowmen entered the various classes, and while good work was impossible under the prevailing conditions, skill and ability were shown by the contestants. Plowmen from Chilliwack were in full strength and took a major share of the prizes.

In the high cut class, J. Ryder of Chilliwack, the only entrant, was awarded second prize. Sod class, G. Dyble, G. Reid, B. Tope, all of Chilliwack. Best crown, Dyble; best finish, Reid.

Novice class—A. Clausen, Abbots-

Following the ceremony a reception was held and later the couple left for Vancouver on a wedding trip. They will make their home in the Abbotsford district.

Roads

MEN have never made a road except for the very good reason that they have wanted very much to reach some place; and in doing it they have always shown themselves indifferent to beautiful things. They break the hills; they ruin the streams. And yet, not knowing what they do, they make the roads also beautiful and mysterious, with a beauty and mystery which endure long after their purpose has been fulfilled, and which become a part in the very magic of the earth.

For great roads give to all the country which they cross an emphasis, and a firmness to whatever is beautiful in its shape. They make the plains more level; they mark, so that the eye can see it more clearly, the beautiful dip and wave of the land at the foot of the hills, they make magnificent the great curve of a hillside. It is so with those great roads of northern France that go rising and falling, rising and falling, across the reaches of the Downs. Where those unswerving roads touch that smoothly rolling country, they seem to increase its very stature, to exalt it.

Again, the roads bring romance. Never does the mind go so far into the distant mists of imagination as when it follows the way of the white roads. This is their final paradox and mystery. One knows that it is by following them and not by turning aside that one will reach the undiscovered places.

No one has yet written a book about the way in which the character of nations is made clear by their roads. Yet the whole difference between the English and the French peoples may be seen in their roads. Each started with the roads the Romans left them, and France still travels by these roads; but in England men now search for them under the turf. The faith of the French mind in reason; its courage in following ideas to their conclusion; its economy; its love of light and good proportion and of the classic in beauty—all these things are expressed by those great roads laid

Former Cattle Rancher Says Farm Profit Small Nowadays

With beef prices a few years ago at 7c and higher, Cariboo ranchers could get along and pay their way. But not at 4c-5c, today's prices says T. C. Mitchell, Sumas Prairie. With his wife and father, Mr. Mitchell bought the 40-acre farm on the old highway, formerly Sumas Dyking District office, from Mrs. Sigler. It has a fine brick house, barn, well improved land with producing vineyard. He has rented adjoining pasture land, "but it's a struggle" said Mr. Mitchell, as we all know. All is not rosy in the tobacco-growing business, either, according to some reports we hear. Fine yields have been obtained by some of the growers, and they are pledging further investments in kilns. But the price, after deductions for freight and other assessments buyers take when able, the grower is wondering where he really "gets off at."

The chicken-pox outbreak in Huntington school is now over. The Boulanger family are moving from the White house to the Benz house.

Sumas Tobacco Crop Worth $100,000 Says Bruce Dixon

Favorable late summer weather has made the tobacco crop on Sumas prairie the largest in years, and the total yield is expected to be around 400,000 pounds, valued at around $100,000, state reports received by the dyking commissioner, Bruce Dixon.

No final report has yet been given as to the average quality. Last year the price obtained was nearly 24 cents per pound. Two buyers from Eastern Canada have been on the prairie during the past week, and it is expected that the full crop will be taken up by Eastern interests. There were 400 acres in tobacco this year, an increase of 275 acres over 1935, and the yield per acre is practically the same.

Fish Fry Placed In "Lost Lake"

In an effort to restock Devil's, or "Lost" Lake on Sumas mountain, 60 pounds of small fry from Cultus Lake hatchery were placed in the lake last week by Game Warden Williams. If the stock flourishes, further plantings will be made.

5,000,000 eggs in sight.

The pronounced increase in steelhead returns in Switzer Creek, near Cultus Lake, is conclusive evidence that the attention paid to this sport fish at the hatchery during the past few years has been justified. Anglers have commented upon the reflection of the work as shown in steelhead catches in the Vedder.

MATSQUI

Diversion cut-off at Matsqui municipal corner will give a better approach to the Bradner road. A crew of men is at work upon this project and also upon the Mt. Lehman swimming pool.

Ridgedale Rod and Gun Club held a goose shoot last week at P. Smith farm. Successful contestants were A. Conroy, E. Gilborg and J. Sward.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Borg, who have resided on the M. Hogen farm for four years, are moving to their own farm on the Page road.

Mr. and Mrs. McQueen have moved from the old Farr ranch at Ridgedale to the Kelleher lumber mill on Sumas mountain.

To facilitate drainage in land adjoining Matsqui slough, several ratepayers are voluntarily digging out and brushing a stretch of slough from the P. Smith farm to the Lunde farm on the Johnston road.

Constable Byatt, who was stationed at Abbotsford for almost a year, being transferred to Courtenay, V.I., several months ago, died last Wednesday. He had suffered from stomach trouble, and died while undergoing an emergency operation. Mrs. Byatt and family have moved to Victoria.

Cultus Salmon Hatchery Turned Over To Game Board for Trout

Cultus Lake fish hatchery, for almost two years subject of an agitation by Sumas and Chilliwack Game Clubs, is one of seven plants now turned over without cost to the provincial game department. The others, formerly operated by the federal department of fisheries, are at Kootenay Lake, Kamloops, Penask Lake, Summerland, Fish Lake and Beaver Lake, Vancouver.

Sockeye salmon and steelhead have been propagated at these plants, and they will in future confine operations to sport fish only. Delegations from Abbotsford and Chilliwack conferred with Hon. Dr. Michaud, federal minister of fisheries, when he came west a year ago, and outcome of negotiations between Attorney-General G. S. Wismer and the federal authorities is announcement now made.

1,000,000 Fish Eggs This Year

Officials of the fish hatchery at Cultus Lake have this year planted 1,000,000 fish eggs at 36 different points in the Fraser Valley, a great increase from the initial efforts six years ago.

In 1931, under the direction of Alex Robinson, Dominion Fisheries official in charge of sockeye propagation at the lake, decided to throw the experience of thirty years behind a hobby and an idea. When the federal government decided to discontinue the project 13 months ago, he found himself in charge of 30,000 fish and no funds to carry on the work. Through efforts of district organizations, however, temporary financial provision was secured.

Six years ago a fountain pool was constructed, and about 40 fish, cut-throat and steelhead, caught in the nearby Switzer Creek, were liberated in the pool. Since that time as many as 70 and not less than 30 fish have been kept there and an average of 2000 eggs a year have been secured from the fish.

From the eggs taken in 1934, 6000 of the better fish were selected and placed in the rearing tank at Cultus Lake and the next year transferred to a large pool. This season, at the age of three years, these fish yielded 1,300,000 eggs and one million of the progeny of the original 50 fish in the fountain pool were planted throughout the valley.

In the five ponds at Smith's falls at Cultus Lake are 10,000 two-year-old steelhead which are also due to spawn next season. Experience with steelhead has shown that at three year a female will yield 1500 eggs. If one third the fish in the ponds are females, there is a prospective

BETTER SERVICE NOW ON PARTY LINE TELEPHONES

This week the B. C. Telephone Company announces improvements in party-line service affecting 45 subscribers in this district. Complaints have been numerous, and at times local switchboard operators have not found explanations easy or pleasant to those subscribers on six, and even seven-party lines whose connections were slow or conversations interrupted.

To obviate this trouble some 45 "cut-overs" have been made by the B. C. Telephone Company, providing two-party lines to all subscribers located within one mile of the Abbotsford exchange. Three miles of wire were strung by G. Gillfillan to provide these new lines. There will be no advance in rates for the improved service The News is informed.

Police Making Brake And Light Tests of Automobiles

Brake and light tests for motorists are underway this week by the police in Abbotsford. Tests made last year gave this district a comparatively high rating in the condition of this equipment, says Constable Rex Hays, traffic officer, who very zealously kept right after all traffic law offenders, big or small. Incidentally, this officer, is transferring to the Game Department, and will be stationed on Vancouver Island, at Duncan.

Matsqui's Youthful Clerk Approves Park Idea Too

JOHN C. PENNINGTON

"Collaborator" with Reeve Cruickshank in landscaping Matsqui's municipal park at Mt. Lehman, invites contributions of shrubs for the ornamental plots now in fall planting. "But" warns the Reeve, "Jack won't have anything planted that doesn't have a Latin name as long as your arm."

If the municipal staff has become a trifle choosy, it's because of some aristocratic plantings given by J. P. Carr, Morris Pihl, G. Ferguson and other nearby florists. Yet there is abundant space for kitchen greenery and the Clerk affirms he wants 'em to round out the beautification plan. Although among other things there are a swimming pool, park tables, alfresco oven and a battery of seats in course of preparation, it is the quarter-mile sprint track that stirs J. Pennington's keenest enthusiasm.

Despite the dark mystery of J.C.P.'s vintage—1870 of thereabouts 'tis said—this Louis Taylor of the Fraser Valley is yet able to show many youngsters how to mow the grass track with a pair of spike shoes. Way back when in his native Durham City he hung up a few heats for posterity to split seconds over, and, despite a lifetime of clerical work has held his membership in the National Physical Trainers' Association, abstains from the three popular vices, and is obviously, notwithstanding occasional grumblings, quite sound in mind and limb. Mr. Pennington came to Bradner 25 years ago with his Abbotsford contemporary, Mr. G. F. Pratt. Together they engaged in storekeeping, Mr. Pratt attending to the merchandising, while his partner managed "production"—kept fit in the store garden. In 1926 Mr. Pennington entered service of Matsqui municipality as Assistant Clerk, and succeeded Mr. E. A. Woods as Clerk four years ago. "When you Abbotsford people get tired of local scenery, come out and picnic in a real six-acre park" was his parting invitation.

swerving and unhedged, open to the sun, with their poplars kept spare and lean by the winds. But they are too straight and too confident. They lead only to that place whose name is on the map. All that the French roads are, the English roads are not. They go, so many of them, between great flowering, wasteful, beautiful hedges; and the trees rise out of the hedges, stretching magnificent arms as if all the richness of the earth were only to give them stature and beauty. Those roadside trees, and the unclipped hedges full of birds, the broad grassy banks, and the ditches that are wayside gardens of wild flowers, what else could speak more clearly than they do of the easy, wasteful, gentle contentment of the English? Walking by them as they wind and wander, seeming not to know which way they want to go, yet all the time following the slopes of the earth, until in some mysterious way of their own they do at last reach the place—walking by them so, the foreigner might come to understand that thing of which he is most impatient in the English—that thing by which, blundering on without any light of reason, the English in the end arrive.

Above all, if he followed the English roads by wayside hedge and elm and oak and beech, by all their flowery, comfortable pleasant windings, until suddenly they lifted him out and up to the open turf of moor or hill, not like those French roads pointing straight as a signpost to the next town, but still wandering—as if they searched for something, over the hills and into the sky—then at last perhaps he would understand the final and the greatest puzzle of the English: why it is that out of this people, not caring much for thought, loving ease and comfort, out of this people of over-prosperous tradesmen, so many poets have come and have traveled on to such strange cities and lands and fairy places as no straight road has ever reached.

These things and many more one might learn from the great roads, but they stand also as a symbol of something greater even than the soul of a people. They are the splendid symbol of all noble art, the symbol of the truth that men only achieve beautiful and enduring works when they are not concerned

The Undiscovered Mineral Deposits of Northern Canada Challenge to the Prospector

The Northwest Territories, covering more than one-third of all Canada, has undiscovered mineral deposits to challenge the adventurous spirit of the explorer and the prospector for many years, Dr. Charles Camsell, deputy minister of mines and resources for Canada, said at Vancouver.

Dr. Camsell was addressing the joint convention of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy and the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

He said the success mining development already had to its credit in the area "must make us regard the Northwest Territories not as invested in snow and ice but rather as a plant that is burgeoning in the spring."

Dr. Camsell, who is also commissioner of the Territories, said the aeroplane had greatly extended both the period and range of the mineral prospector's activities in the far north.

Topographical and geological mapping was speeded up when the plane broadened the prospector's field of activity, but as yet hardly any intensive prospecting has been done outside the western part of the Territories, except here and there along the Hudson's Bay coast and to some extent inland. Dr. Camsell said, however, minerals were known to occur.

He said the westerly part of the mainland of the Territories, in the Mackenzie district, was making headway in the development of its mineral wealth, but even this district received little recognition until the Norman oil field was discovered in 1920, 100 miles south of the Arctic circle.

Dr. Camsell said 1929 was the "true turning point in the affairs of the Northwest Territories," because in that year mineral exploration companies demonstrated the aeroplane could be used to advantage in northern latitudes. Subsequent success of efforts to extract radium from pitchblende deposits east and northeast of Bear Lake had shown mining could be profitably carried on in the northland, he said.

The deputy minister said discovery of gold last year on the east shore of Gordon lake, 50 miles northeast of Yellowknife bay, "may prove very important." He said many veins had since been uncovered all around the lake, and "most of the work to date has given gratifying results."

Dr. Camsell said at least 3,000 square miles of the country south of Great Slave Lake was "easy to prospect," because the veins of mineral-bearing ore can be readily observed from the air because "the rocks stand out in bold relief owing to the absence of overburden."

Not The Right Type

General Gave Reason For Sending Officer Back To England

Death of Brigadier-General E. P. Crozier recalled to the London Evening Standard one of his "weeding out" processes in a brigade he took over in France.

Many officers were sent back to England. One asked why.

The general said he just didn't think the man the sort of officer he wanted.

"Why, sir?"
"You just don't fit in."
"Why not, sir?"

"Every week you get a pot of Devonshire cream from home don't you? And every week you eat it all by yourself and never offer a spot to anybody. That's enough. You're not the type I want. Good-bye."

Something New In Time

Clock That Struck Up To 102 Bewildered Farmer

An Ontario farmer bought a large mantel clock, one of the kind that strikes the hours and half hours. That night he was awakened by the striking of the clock. Something had gone wrong with the mechanism and the chimes, instead of stopping with the usual 12, kept right on sounding. The bewildered farmer counted them up to 102, and then awakened his wife:

"Mary, for goodness' sake, get up! It's later than I've ever known it to be before!"

Hooch, a prohibition term for whisky, is a contraction of the Alaskan word hoochino, which is applied to a rum distilled from sugar and flour.

Life On The Prairies

Has Many Compensations Which Make It Enjoyable

A generation ago Ontario boys by the hundreds came west on harvest excursions and returned to tell the old folks on their hundred acre farms of the lavish grain production of the fast farms of the prairies. In many instances the whole family would migrate westward, having sold their land, stock, implements and other belongings.

In discussing the changed situation the Seaforth Expositor, located in Huron county, which furnished many families to the westward movement says:

"We have never experienced a flood. We have never experienced a drouth. We don't know what a dust storm is. We have never seen drifting soil. Shade trees line our streets; the lawns are green; the gardens are a riot of color. In the country the trees are larger, more imposing, and they are of every kind. The pastures are green; the crops are growing so fast you can almost see them grow. That growth spells abundance—abundance everywhere."

A green, pleasant and lush land for comfortable, complacent, easy-going people forsooth. But, we have seen—

A prairie fire a mile wide traveling faster than a man could run; Land dissolved into a foaming yellowy froth by floods, and pouring into a swollen river, leaving behind holes that would contain a large house;

A tornado and felt the mighty arm of Boreas in its surge across the prairie;

Great forest fires on the ramparts of huge mountains and felt their burning breath;

Fifty square miles of green prairie after a Spring rain;

And mingled with the great Rocky Mountains and looked with awe upon

"Bright-faced Aurora rosy-fingered dawn, Standing tip-toe on misty mountain tops."

And felt cloud-high dust storms, pelting hail storms, cold that bit to the bone, heat that burned like a cinder, blizzards that cut like a knife;

The tossing horns above a sea of stampeding cattle;

A vast panorama of wheat extending mile after mile across the level prairies, the green turning to straw color on a late Summer day;

A great land produce in less than a generation grain wealth whose total equals half the value of all the gold stored up in the coffers of the great nations of the world.

We have seen a hard-bitten, fateful people fighting to retain a toe-hold when all the elements seem to be conspiring against them—a pioneer people in a tough, pioneer land.

We may have all missed much, so far from the ease, security and apparent contentment of the somnolent countryside of Southern Ontario.

But we have lived, by the gods, we have lived!—Brooks, Alberta Bulletin.

Cobra Rescues Woman

Killed An Indian Raider Who Broke Into House

A pet cobra rescued its mistress by killing an Indian raider who broke into her house in the village of Gunpur and attacked her, according to stories published in the Indian Press.

The cobra was at the door when the raiding dacoit tried to enter the house. He slashed at it with a dagger and the snake slipped into a nearby rat hole.

A few minutes later, when it saw its mistress being bound and gagged by the dacoit, it slipped out of the hole again and bit his ankle. The dacoit dropped dead a few minutes later.

Another story of a snake that did a good turn comes from Kohat, in the Frontier Province.

The snake crawled out from below a wall and frightened away a number of women who had gathered at an adjacent spring. A few minutes later the wall collapsed over the spring. The women would have been killed if they had remained there.

A short distance from the spring three women were killed and four seriously injured by the falling debris.

Success is an end to be attained not by doing the things we like to do, but liking to do the things we have to do.

Prove Old Tradition True

Observers See Woodcock Carrying Young Birds On Its Back

That age-old tradition, scoffed at during many generations, that the Woodcock carries its young on its back has at last been proved true by the British Trust for Ornithology.

A hundred and four observers lying hidden to trace the movements of this shyest of birds, record having seen woodcock flying with chicks between their wings.

Eighteen have seen the adult bird return to the nest and carry off a second chick.

The woodcock has also been the subject of ringing—having a ring tied onto its leg.

This has proved that the apparent disappearance of the birds from their usual haunts in August until late autumn, when migrants come in from abroad, is not due to emigration but to the fact that they go away for a vacation, leaving their native woodlands for a holiday on moorland or hills.

Ringling has shown that the recurrence of the birds in woodland in late October is not due only to fresh feathered visitors to Britain but in large measure to residents returning to business.

Three Things Needful

Negro Woman Taught Her Children How To Be Useful

"Auntie," said a gentleman who had just learned that the youngest son of his colored cook had been appointed stenographer to a large manufacturer "tell me how you have brought up your children so that each one of them has become so good and useful a man?" "Oh, honey," was the reply, "that's nothing. I had no education and I could only teach them three things—just three things I taught 'em: their prayers, and their manners, and to work."

The first cablegram was sent from London to New York on Aug. 28, 1857.

Trade With The Orient

War In China Should Not Alter Canada's Plans

It is with admiration and respect that British Columbia people will endorse the opinion of R. E. Thorne of Montreal that Canada's true trading future lies in the Orient and that the only way to accomplish that future is by direct and personal contact with Oriental consumers.

This opinion is in direct and refreshing contrast with some other recent eastern opinions that the "consuming power of the Chinese people is so low" that Chinese trade is hardly worth an effort.

The truth is that while there are hordes of Chinese whose consuming power is very low from our standpoint, there are also, among the 500 million people of that country, a wealthy class whose potential consuming power is probably greater than that of any other nation.

Thus it is utter foolishness for us to throw up our hands, because of the Sino-Japanese war, and relinquish all our plans for developing commercial contacts with Asia.

For no matter what national economic extremity this conflict may conceivably bring to Japan, it is doubtful if the economic integrity and the commercial requirements of China will be more than slightly affected.

Even the razing of Shanghai does little more than to destroy some of the trading machinery wherewith goods from the Occident poured into Asia.

War or no war, Canada's commercial invasion of Asia has not yet even begun.—Vancouver Sun.

A captain is responsible for his ship even when the pilot is steering it. And the skipper can take the wheel away from the pilot any time he feels like it.

"The camera never lies," says a writer. And it takes the old family album to convince some people that the truth can be terrible.

Made Official Enemies

Boundary Line Splits Happy Community Of Saar Valley Hamlet

The frantic hates of Europe are concentrated into a capsule drama in a little frontier village on the edge of the Saar Valley. Once a happy little community, the hamlet has been split in two by an international boundary commission. Now one side of the main street is in Germany; the other in France. Those who once were neighbors, fraternizing across the street, have been turned into official enemies.

Edward Hunter tells about this village in Coronet Magazine. Those who live on the German side of the boundary may not now cross the road, as they did, to spend Saturday night in the cafe on the French side. They are, under German currency laws, forbidden to take money out of their country.

There is a creamery on the French side of the road. But the women and children across the street must go without butter because of the shortage of fats.

The tobacco store happens to be in Germany. But their neighbors on the other side have to walk a mile and a half to buy tobacco from the nearest French shop.

Housewives do not dare to cross the road for a visit with their neighbors without properly viced passports and the formality of entry as an alien entering a foreign country.

Half the children in the town are being brought up to speak German; the other half French. They are not allowed to play together. If a ball rolls across the street it is confiscated by the customs officers and the children may not run over and pick it up.

The account given by Mr. Hunter reads like sheer fantasy. But is there any reason to believe it is not true in every detail? For what is happening in miniature in the village of Nassweiler-Mosbruck (yes, it has two separate names now) is happening all over Europe. The strangler vine of international hate flourishes even more vigorously when allowed to grow at will on a large scale than when developed in a village test-tube.—Financial Post.

Bones Turn To Stone

Case Reported That Is Unparalleled In Medical History

The most expensive consultation ever held in the world pondered the case of a young Cleveland, Ohio, man whose bones, joints, and backbone are gradually changing to a stone-like hardness with complete rigidity setting in.

Dr. Eugene Freedman of Cleveland, presented the case at the International Congress of Radiology as one unparalleled in medical history and frankly asked the 3,000 X-ray and radium specialists attending the congress from all over the world to enter into consultation and advise him what to do.

In spite of every examination which would be made during the past six years, the real cause of his trouble cannot be diagnosed, Dr. Freedman said, and for the past year his bones and joints have become progressively more rocklike. The case was presented, he added, "in the hope that some one may help to elucidate the true nature of the disease."

Alberta's Crop

Promises To Yield Larger Return Than Any Year Since 1929

Despite the adverse conditions of the early part of the season, Alberta's 1937 farm output promises to yield larger returns than in any year since 1929. The heavy rains of the middle of July and the subsequent favorable weather are responsible, along with prevailing prices, for that welcome prospect.

During the past three weeks the Journal has reviewed in its news columns the situation in the principal branches of the province's agriculture. In all of them a marked improvement has been revealed. It is estimated conservatively that the total production will have a value of $170,000,000 as compared with a little over $157,000,000 in 1936 and less than $120,000,000 in 1933, when it reached the lowest point in recent years.—Edmonton Journal.

Watermelons and bread are the main diet of many people in Iran during several months of the year.

October was designated as the "turkey moon" by the Natchez Indian tribe.

The British empire, bound together by sea routes, is building new "life lines"—this time by air.

From Hong Kong in the east to Vancouver in the west, Great Britain and the dominions are spreading newly-wrought wings to weld more firmly the integral parts of the commonwealth.

From Southampton it is only five days by air to India, only seven days to Singapore or Cape Town and only 11 days to Port Darwin, Australia.

New schedules to be put into effect shortly will take passengers and mail to India in half that time, to Singapore and Cape Town in 4½ days and to Australia in a week flat.

In the yards of British aircraft builders, 28 flying boats are taking shape. Building simultaneously are 12 new airliner landplanes, equipped to carry 27 passengers on long journeys.

British airliners are surveying a route over the north Atlantic to Canada and the United States. Canada shortly will inaugurate its first transcontinental air line. Projected are British routes from Canada's west coast to New Zealand and thence to Australia.

Other European countries are far from idle. Germany, Britain's leading rival on the air lanes, has developed extensive domestic services and competed with France in flying the south Atlantic to Brazil. France, Italy and The Netherlands have large air services outside their own boundaries.

At the close of 1936, air ministry figures showed, Britain had 124 transports in operation, Germany 136, France 87, Italy 78, The Netherlands 46, Belgium 24, Poland 19, Sweden 13 and Norway 12.

In total mileage of routes, Britain led with 26,958. France was second with 23,973; Germany had 23,494. The Netherlands 17,397 and Italy 14,670.

Responsible for most of the empire aviation development is Imperial Airways, Ltd., whose planes during the 12 months ended March 31, 1936, carried 68,373 passengers a distance of 4,560,718 miles.

With associated companies Imperial Airways operates every week in each direction the following services: Five flights between England and Egypt; two to Palestine, Iraq, India, Burma, Malaya and Australia; one to Hong Kong; three to Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Uganda, Kenya, Tanganyika and Northern and Southern Rhodesia; two to Portuguese East Africa and the Union of South Africa. Daily service is maintained to most of the European capitals.

First Military Bands

Probably Started From Time When Heralds Were Used

The origin of military bands is lost in the mists of the past. Musicians used to play at the royal courts, but the first record of musical instruments in connection with soldiery dates from the time when kings used to ride into battle at the heads of their armies, and when the fights were lost and won the kings used to meet there and then to parley terms of settlement. They advanced to meet each other preceded by heralds blowing trumpets. Gradually, it is believed, musicians were given some place in the military organization. Being more ornamental than useful, so far as military purposes were concerned, they were dressed in gaudy uniforms. Germany was the first country to officially add bands to the strength of the regiments, some 200 years ago. In warfare they served the purpose of stretcher bearers, and indeed that was part of their duties until the period of the World War. Chiefly the purpose of the bands was to stimulate marching and to pep up men when they became tired.

Up to less than 100 years ago most of the bandmen in the British Army were Germans, and for a long time after that the bandmasters were Germans. However, the British War Office instituted Kneller Hall, which is a training school for musicians, and all the men in the British Army bands to-day graduate from that institution. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

"I am very curious to know," said he, "what you would say if I kissed you!"

"If you were really curious," she replied, "you would know by now."

Too Many Trappers Says Serl

Government royalty upon fur pelts is inconsistent with market prices and a hardship upon trappers states
Roy Serl, Huntingdon. Some 35 trappers licenses are issued in the Abbotsford-Chilliwack district at a fee of $10 each. Last year, he estimates the total catch at 500-600 muskrat, less than a dozen mink, a few skunks, and two or three coyote. Royalties upon the total value of this fur were 20 per cent of the market price of the muskrat, and unreasonably heavy upon the other fur. Mr. Serl also contends the government should not issue so many licenses over this district, which is settled up and almost "trapped out." He is getting his sets ready for winter, and run a line through Sumas district.

White Poppies Blow

Here and there in local gardens the graceful white poppy swayed to summer breezes perhaps a little more conspicuously this year. Can it be that the Asiatic, now so common in our midst, would complete his wonderful gardens with the typical patch of white common to the countryside of India, Straits Settlements, the South China coast? Or again in parts of south Europe, where even

Locals Win 4-3 In Keen Soccer Game

Abbotsford soccer team gained their first points in the V. & D.
league on Sunday at Jubilee grounds when, in one of the best evenly-played games seen here for some time, they defeated St. Regis by a score of 4 goals to 3.

The locals threatened from the start and narrowly missed on two occasions. They took the lead on a goal by Ralston, after some nice play on the left wing. Not long after the locals scored again, Plowright converting a spot shot after Ralston had been brought down in the penalty area. St. Regis got their first-half goal from a long drive from the left wing that hit the inside of the upright and bounced in.

After the breather spell, Abbotsford gained the upper hand with two nice goals, Plowright and Ralston scoring. Blacklock also drove the ball through, but the whistle blew for offside on Ralston. St. Regis pressed hard and scored twice, once through misunderstanding of the Abbotsford defence men. The last fifteen minutes of the game were as hectic as ever seen here—Abbotsford trying desperately to hold their lead, St. Regis trying just as hard to gain their first win of the season. The final whistle came none too soon for the Abbotsford team and their rooters!

Abbotsford's line-up: T. Webster;
Marrlette, Reid; Bradshaw, McBeth, Brown; Thompson, Ralston, Plowright, Blacklock, Blakeburn.

Things look brighter on the soccer front after last Sunday's game.
If Abbotsford retain that line-up and have Godson and one or two more in reserve, they should win their share of games. Blackburn at left outside was tricky, hard to beat and always a scoring threat. Thompson on the right wing, while sometimes erratic, used his speed to advantage, while the defence was bolstered by the addition of Brown and Reid at left back.

The meeting of the Abbotsford
Junior Football Club, held Thursday evening last was very well attended and a spirit of enthusiasm was very noticeable. Officers were elected as follows: President, J. W. B. Watson; vice-president, W. Morgan; secretary, treasurer, D. Shellard; committee:
J. Rowley, H. Walker and G. Grant.
It was decided to get in touch with teams from nearby points and arrange for games to be played on Sundays when the Jubilee grounds are not otherwise used.

Practices are being held Wednes-

the crying baby is by some mothers, given a poppy opiate to keep it quiet while she works.

For the dried juice of the white poppy furnishes an extract, a crystalline alkaloid whose main constituent is opium.

Undoubtedly the prevailing white poppy is selected because of its ornamental beauty...yet, there are other varieties of equal color appeal.
